Dear Mr. Martin,

City Harvest is grateful to CBS Radio and WWFS for featuring representatives from City Harvest on its Community Affairs program and running our public service announcements. These interviews and placements have helped increase attention to City Harvest's work to end hunger in New York City.

Deborah Gordon spoke with our executive director, Jilly Stephens, in the fall about many of City Harvest's long-term initiatives to end hunger. In the spring, David Grossnickle, our associate director of food development, appeared on Deborah's show to promote our "Feed the Kids" food drive. PSAs run on FRESH 102.7 have also helped encourage New Yorkers to support City Harvest.

Last year well over one million New Yorkers, including some 350,000 children, relied on food provided by a soup kitchen, food pantry, or shelter. More than 20 million pounds of that food, much of it healthy fruits and vegetables, was rescued and delivered by City Harvest. We're pleased to acknowledge Deborah and FRESH 102.7 for helping City Harvest continue to do such vital work.

Thank you for your time.

Best wishes,

Erin Hoover
